

Theoretical framework

It is a set of concepts, theories and approaches that analyze the relationships between men and women in society, with the aim of identifying and addressing gender inequalities and promoting equal opportunities and rights for all people, regardless of their gender.

Some people who address the topic:

1. Simone de Beauvoir: Her work "The Second Sex" is a milestone in feminist theory. Beauvoir analyzes the oppression of women and argues that gender is a social construction.
2. Judith Butler: She is a feminist philosopher known for her work on queer theory and gender performativity. Her book "Gender Trouble" has been influential in the study of gender identity.
3. Bell Hooks: She is a feminist writer and activist who has addressed topics such as black feminism, intersectionality and popular culture in her works, including "Feminism from the Margin" and "Feminist Theory: From Margin to Center."
4. Audre Lorde: An African-American writer, feminist, and queer activist, known for her essays and poetry exploring the intersection of race, gender, sexuality, and class.
5. Emma Watson: Actress and activist known for her role in the Harry Potter series. She has been a prominent advocate for gender equality and has worked with the UN on their HeForShe campaign.
6. Malala Yousafzai: Pakistani activist, advocate for girls' education, and Nobel Peace Prize winner. Malala has fought against gender discrimination in education and has inspired millions around the world.